

C4 joins Dambusters reconstruction

UK broadcaster Channel 4 will air a documentary it commissioned with History Channel Canada recreating the Second World War Dambusters bombing raid.

The Return of the Dambusters (1x120') is a copro from UK indie Windfall Films and Omni Film Productions in Vancouver. Details of the show were first unveiled by History in September last year.

C4 has now announced its involvement in the project, which follows engineers, explosives experts and aircrew as they try to recreate the 1943 raid by a Lancaster bomber squadron on key dams in Germany's industrial heartland, using the innovative 'bouncing bomb.'

The film steers clear of dramatic reconstruction and CGI and features a purpose-built 130ft wide, 30ft high concrete dam, a modified Douglas DC4 flying perilously low and one huge explosion, according to Windfall.

"The Return of the Dambusters will give viewers a unique and vivid insight into a momentous part of our history with a fascinating approach into reconstructing the bouncing bomb and building a model of the Möhne Dam," said Windfall director Ian Duncan.
